Alternate Energy Solutions Inc., a renewable energy development company, recently elected Melvin W. Bredemeier, a veteran Midwest banking official with wide corporate legal expertise, as a member of its board of directors and as its project finance manager.

Bredemeier, 54, becomes the sixth member of AES's board and brings significant management, banking and legal experience to the company. John Wolar, president of Alternate Energy Solutions, Inc., said "With extensive experience in finance and banking, Mel Bredemeier brings a unique ability to structure financial solutions for renewable energy funding for domestic and international projects. We are pleased to welcome Bredemeier to the company."

Bredemeier added, "I'm delighted to be joining Alternate Energy's board. With the unsettled geopolitical era we live in, and the continuing uncertainty of foreign sources of oil for the United States, I can't think of any more pressing energy need than to develop alternate renewable energy resources, such as AES is doing."

Alternate Energy Solutions assists academic institutions, municipal governments, agricultural business, and private entities with the assessing of their renewable energy resources, system design, operation and maintenance. AES facilitates system integration of wind turbine, solar thermal and geothermal heating, and specialized energy recovery devices. Presently the company is involved with a Michigan intra-state public stock offering of its Series A Preferred Stock only to Michigan residents, solely by and pursuant to the prospectus.
